Activity Goal

- Understanding the Four Treasures of the Study in China
- Understanding Chinese Martial Arts
- Understanding Traditional Chinese Musical Instruments

Activity Introduction

During the 10th anniversary celebration and Chinese cultural graduation ceremony, K2 and K3 children performed dances titled 'The Four Treasures of the Study,' 'Huo Yuanjia,' and Chinese rhythmic music.

In the dance 'The Four Treasures of the Study,' children used books and brush props to learn that the brush, ink, paper, and inkstone are fundamental tools of Chinese calligraphy and painting. They paired this with the song 'Confucius Says' to understand the teachings of the Analects: 'Do not look at what is improper, do not listen to what is improper, do not speak what is improper, do not act on what is improper.'

In the dance 'Huo Yuanjia,' elements of kung fu were incorporated, helping children understand the importance of being both cultured and martial, embodying wisdom and bravery, while recognizing that kung fu is a traditional Chinese martial art.

Finally, in the rhythmic music segment, children used traditional Chinese instruments to participate in the performance, accompanied by the song 'Descendants of the Dragon,' allowing them to gain a deeper understanding of traditional Chinese artistic culture.
